How to Host a Neighborhood Block Party on a Budget

Having a party doesn't have to break the bank, and here are some ideas when it comes to planning and hosting a neighborhood block party:

- Have a BYOM and side dish party. Ask each neighbor to bring the meat for their family that they plan on eating as well as a side dish. You could also ask a few guests to bring beverages or a dessert instead of a side if you think you'll have enough. You could also ask each neighbor to contribute $5 towards meat for burgers and hot dogs and just bring a side dish if you think it's too complicated to have everyone bring their own meat.
- Ask several neighbors to bring their grills. Have the grills going and add each family's meat to the grill to cook and serve.
- Set up Shade Canopies. Our neighbor had several shade canopies set up. In the heat of summer, these would be great to block the sun or rain.
- Ask the neighbors to bring their own lawn chairs.
- Organize activities for the kids. One great activity for kids is a Water Balloon Fight. Fill up some water balloons before the party so the kids can have a fun and cooling activity. Really no planned activities are needed on our street since they're usually busy riding bikes or scooters or throwing the football.

If you plan to have a huge party and block off the street, be sure to inquire into any permits needed from your city or any noise ordinances if you plan on partying late. But really, an informal party with the neighbors can be a really fun way to spend an afternoon/evening.
